MONEY MARKET AND COMMERCIAL.

FRIDAY EVENING.

In the Stock and Share market transactions were more numerous to-day than in the early part of the week. So dull was the market as has not been experienced for a long time, holders of stock being unwilling to sell even at the former prices that are now asked. In Banks, Joint Stock are quoted at 16 buyers, 16½ sellers; City offered at 12½, buyers 12½; Commercial wanted at 105, sellers at 104½—for new issue there were no buyers at 80, but no sellers; Mercantile held for 9 buyers at 51; New South Wales obtained all at 66½, sellers at 67; Victoria had no buyers at 21, buyers 20½, on the New Zealand register they were obtainable at 20½; for Union 97 asked, 65 offered; Queensland National realized 27 11a. 6d. In Steam the only business reported was in North Shore Ferry at 17s. 8d.; Australasian was held for 18½, buyers at 18½; for Clarence and Richmond there were sellers at 5, buyers at 4, protestant stock wanted at 14; Hunter River maintained the advance previously reported, and offers of 73 failed to find sellers; Hawesara had sellers at 6½, buyers 5½. In Insurance, Accident offered at 1s. 3d., buyers at 1s.; Australian General had buyers at 8½, and Australian Mutual at 9s. 6d., but there were no sellers; for City Mutual 1s. 2d. offered, 1s. 4d. asked; Mercantile Mutual had sellers at 1s. 6d., buyers 1s. 6d.; New South Wales Market at 66½, sellers at 66; at 72s. 6d. obtainable at 73s. 6d., sellers at 68s. 6d.; for Sydney Fire 73s. 6d. offered, 76s. asked; Sydney Marine were dealt in at 35s.; for United 45s. was offered, 40s. asked. Australian Gas light held for 14½, buyers at 14½—new shares wanted at 5½, sellers at 4; for Sydney Exchange 9 asked, but there were no sellers. Eyrewood Bridge had sellers at 7½, buyers at 7½; for Sydney Waterworks the 3d. buyers at 8s. 8d. Colson Palace closed former buyers at 22s., sellers at 25s. In Coal, Bulli were offered at 11s. buyers at 11s.; Wallaseed sold at £14 0s. Warratah wanted at 7s. sellers at 7s. Value of Clayfield realized 10s. 9d. Great Cobar were again dealt in at 85s. and 84s. For Keweenaw's Gold 8s. offered, no sellers. The following had buyers at 8s.: Bland and Albion Consols had sellers at 8s., buyers 5½; N. S. W. Funded Stock 97 offered, no sellers. 103 offered for City of Sydney debentures, and 102 for A. S. N. Company debentures. Volunteer land orders wanted at 120, sellers at 124.

As will be seen in our telegraphic intelligence, a Border Customs treaty has been arranged between the Government of New South Wales and that of South Australia for three years, under which there will be free trade across the border, on the condition of the payment of $47,500 per annum by South Australia to this colony.

A moderate amount of business was done in the Import market, chiefly for Christmas supplies. A Border Customs treaty has been arranged between the trading requirements.—Adelaide flour is selling up to £13; New-South-Wales to £11 10s.; and Victoria to £10 10s. The quotations for wheat are nominal, as the market is bare. From Morgan, Connor, and Glyde's circular of November 27, we learn that the shipments from Adelaide to date, from January 1st amounted to 276,000 bushels, and the balance available for export was reduced to 28,799 tons. A considerable trade was done in dried fruits; some holders were cleared out of currants at 6½d., and sales afterwards were made at 7d.; Elemos were taken to arrive at 8½d., and holders are asking 8½d. on the spot; prime muscateles were sold at 11d.; dried apples are firm at 9d., the market-being bare. Primes' Lemons were dealt in at 8½d., holders are asking 9½d. At last Saturday's sale, Albert sent cases at 8s. 8d. and 8s. 8d., with a strong market. Ling in punchdoms was sold at 6d., and holders are asking more; and in case it is quoted at 6½d to 7d. Ovenside of Flag brand of salmon were cleared out at 7s. 9d. Almost all descriptions of fish are firmer. In Sugars we note that a large lot of the Jason's sugar, low yellow grade, has been taken over for the Malayan colonies, and the balance available for the market is small. A parcel of white brewers' crystals £30 was given. Two parcels of trade lines only at current rates. Salt is firmly held, and an offer of £5 5s. for W. and W. fine, to arrive, scarcely met holders' views. There has been some little inquiry for pickles: Morton's selling at 8s. 7½d. to 8s. 9d. according to size of lot, and Hatty's at 10s. In Liquors, there has been a good deal of doing. Black & White Cannon and Saunders' ale, a trade parcel sold at 10s. 9d. A good line of Bass's ale, by Danke, was bought at market rates. Tennant's is moving off, in trade lots, at 8s. 6d. and 5s. 6d. Isler and Bell's was quoted at 10s. Stout, Pig brand, in stone bottles, was sold at 10s. In brandy there is still a good demand for Hennessy's at 30s. 6d. to 30s. 9d. for small sizes. The price of Cognac is going up, and holders are asking 11s. C. C. Robinson at 6d. Brandy at 6d. Lemon's brought 8s. Trade Hart's rum, a small line, realized 8s. Headlie's timagule cordial sold at 12s. 6d. In metals there is a little inquiry for galvanized iron, Braby's selling at £24 to £24 5s., and Stork at about the same. We hear of a sale of sheet lead, picked sizes, at £20 0s. 6d. Tin plates have had some attention. I. C. Cooke are held for £2s. L. C. Charcoal sold at 20s., and I. Crose charcoal at 24s. A line of Hall's balling powder, for Queensland, was quoted at 6½d. f.o.b. American turps, in a small line, sold at 1s. 10d. We hear of line of cream of tartar moving at 1s. 1d. and 1s. 6d. Castile soda was dealt in at £10 0s. 6d. per cent., and a small quantity of palm oil was taken at £20. The market was well supplied at Darling Harbour this morning. The supplies were almost, in fact, in excess of requirements. The attendance of buyers was fair; but the prices realized were as a rule lower than those obtained on previous sales during the week. New hay is coming forward very freely in good condition. There is a little odd hay in the market. Wheat and wheat straw is weak down to 4d. to 5s. 6d. Oats and wheaten chaff

Wool.—Woolly, and prime sorts realised on from 2s. 3d. to 3s. 6d. Chaff suffered in the general depression, best samples fetching from 4s. to 4s. 3d., other qualities, 3s. to 2s. 6d. Lucerne was very dull of sale, the market being fully 10s. to 20s. a ton less than this day week's prices. Best Windsor in trusses brought from 2s. 3d. to 2s. 6d.; medium sorts, rather higher quality, 1s. to 2s. 3d. In demand for straw bales, being the season obtainable for prime bundles; while for baler 2s. 10d. to 3s. 3d. were the figures. The maize market is still overstocked, and there has been no alteration in the figures, 2s. to 2s. 1d. for prime samples being the prices. Butter is also low in great quantities, and, for the very best is the highest price obtainable; while as for 3s. 3d. has had to reduce its former fair prices. Bacon, in demand, is worth from 7d. to 8d.; broiler 8s. to 11s. per dozen, with fair demand; Hunter River potatoes, 3s. to 4s.; old potatoes, from Sutton Forest and Moss Vale, £2 and £2 6s., with bags in; Circular Head, 15s. to 25s.; onions (Hunter River), 5s. 6d. to 7s. On the whole the best quality of lucerne hay is still quoted at £2 7s., while other sorts are obtainable at from 5s. 6d. to 6s. 6d.; clover hay, 10s. to 12s.; lucerne, 3s. to 3s. 6d.; dacks, 4s. to 4s. 6d.; peas, 6s. 6d. to 7s. 6d.; turkey cocks, 9s. to 14s.; turkey hens, 6s. to 10d. Honey (bush), 3d.

Mosses.—Tipping and Co., in their circular of the 13th October report that the vintage throughout the wine districts of Europe is nearly completed, and there appeared no reason to doubt that the yield would be less than last year's. It is pointed out that the average quantity said to be considerably under the average; and of Oporto, the quantity is said to be very deficient; the better accounts were to hand from Spain of the yield. Great firmness pervaded the brandy market, with a rise of 3d. since last report. The vintage results in Cognac, it was expected, would be disappointing, owing to the fact that the districts well-irrigated would only provide about the fifteenth or twentieth part of the wines distilled in medium years. Great indisposition was evinced on the part of growers to accept even current rates for their reserved stocks, and they showed a strong determination to hold for higher prices; therefore it seemed impossible for Messrs. James Hennessy and Co., Managers of the district, to quote or offer any brandy of this year's vintage. The stock on this side of the river was sensibly diminishing. These facts had inspired holders with increased confidence, and in the result a very firm tone prevailed, and it was impossible not to foresee that much higher prices are inevitable. An improved demand for English consumption had been experienced by several houses, and the strength of the position. Rum was quoted as being a little firmer, and whiskeys also.

Messrs. Mort and Co., to-day, held their second sale of wool, which was displayed at their new warehouses, Darling Harbour. The attendance of buyers was good, and there was a brisk demand for superior parcels of greasy and good conditioned washed fleeces, but few of them. The bulk of the sheepskins sold at reduced values. Over 1200 bales were disposed of, greasy ranging from 8d. to 14d., several lots bringing 11d. to 13d., washed fleece 14½d. to 21½d. Amongst the lots sold were—WR over Woolgaro, greasy, at 12d.; S over C, at 11½d.; J over J, at 11d.; PTJ, at 11d., WP over Mulgea, at 10½d.; JT over ATJ, over Six Mile, at 10½d.; DT over E, at 10½d.; H over M, at 10½d.; Oland, at 10½d.; ST over C, at 10½d.; B, at 11d.; JGG over Mulgea, at 11d.; Burra, at 11½d.; DM over Moppie, fleece, at 18d.; NOJ, at 18d.; PI over 2, at 18½d.; FGM over Hillsdale, at 20½d.; Bogley over Islands, greasy, at 18d.; R reversed D joined, at 12d.; BJ over Y, at 11½d.; BL over Kason, fleece at 19½d.; N. Wilson over Caloola, at 19½d.; A over Hume, 2 21½d.

Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Mort and Co., Maiden, Hill, and Clark, J. Bridge, F. L. Barker, and Brunker and Wolfe, held their weekly sales of produce to-day. Hides were scarcely so firm, except for extra heavy, which brought up to 4½d. per lb., light and dry realising as high as 5d. There was little or no demand for tallow for export, and not more than a third of the fallow offered was sold. Best beef realised up to 22s 10d. and some 22s 7½d.

Messrs. William Stoenne and Co. report the sale of Cowley Plains station, Warrego district, Queensland, with 1900 head of cattle, working horses, plant, &c., for £10,000; purchaser, Mr. Arthur McDonald.

The Australian Mortgage, Land, and Finance Company (limited), have received the following telegrams from London, dated 2nd inst.—“Tone is hesitating, prices are in favour of buyers. New wools, 1d. to 2d. below February.”

Amongst the exports per the R. M. S. Brisbane, which left to-day, for Hongkong, via Queensland Ports, there were five boxes gold of the value of £5407.

The Darling Downs cleared to-day for London, with 4570 loads wool, 1000 tons of hides, the largest consignment yet sent, and 1000 bales leather, 902 bags copper, 24 bales rag, 61480 ingots copper, 395 tons shale.

The Customs duties received to-day were as follows:—Spirits, £2343 3s. 6d.; wine (still), £132 15s.; wine (sparkling), 211 s.; beer, and beer (import), £22 10s.; ale, porter, and beer (in bottle), £21 7s. 6d.; tobacco and snuff, £14 15s.; spirits over duty, £12 10s.; sugar, £2 10s.; 14 6d.; tea, £410 0s. 6d.; opium (unrefined), 5590 0s.; opium, £3 10s.; dried fruits, 2633 18s. 6d.; nuts, £2 10s. 6d.; sarapahiti, £26 6s. 3d.; excess duty, £226 7s. 6d.; and sundries, £12 10s. 6d.; hardware and light goods, £2 18s. 6d.; total, £1838 8s. 8d.

MINING REPORT.

GREAT COBARR COPPER MINING CO.—The mining manager reports for four weeks ended 15th instant, as under:—The stoping and crushing departments, during the past four weeks, have been appearing. The crescent going north from the 30-fathom level, south of Barton's shaft, has been extended 13 feet. The 30-fathom level going north and west, from the same point, has been extended 10 feet of the lode. At the 20-fathom level, south of Barton's shaft, the crescent going east has been extended 10 feet 2 inches. North of Barton's shaft, at the same point, the lode has been extended 10 feet. At the 10-fathom level, south of Becker's shaft, this end has been driven 17 feet 3 inches. At the 20-fathom level, north of Becker's shaft, the end and middle workings have been extended 10 feet. At Becker's shaft, Stevens and party started to sink a vein, and completed 11 feet 3 inches. At the 10-fathom level, north of Becker's shaft, Rainbow and party have driven 11 feet 3 inches. Between Barton's and Becker's shafts, has been deepened 29 feet 1 inch. About 2000 tons of ore have been raised during the four weeks. At the smelting furnace, 240 tons of slag and 240 tons of refined copper were made. No. 15 furnace is nearly finished, the sickle is completed, and the ironwork ready. The harden and light coals are now in the furnace. There are now fourteen furnaces working, one refining, two roasting, and rest reducing ore. Work is generally going on satisfactorily beyond the interference of the dry weather.

LATEST COMMERCIAL TELEGRAM.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

What is quoted at 4s. 4d., as it is not believed that recent rains will injure the harvest operations. The yield of wheat in many of the districts is likely to be larger than last year.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Trenchard again may be said to have ceased. Though Mr. Gladstone's Government do not expect such a satisfactory result to follow the indictment of Land the Leaguers, this step would still be useful in enabling them to do more for the good of the country. The necessity of assembling Parliament for a winter session. The present intimation that such prosecutions are contemplated has had a temporary influence upon the more compromised agitators. Should these gentlemen let their tongues wag too freely again, and continue inciting their ignorant audiences to murder and rebellion, then actual prosecution would be proceeded with. The idea about the death of Nicholas and, as the trials would order down the country so long as they lasted, at least, there would be no chance of an alarming crisis arising before the beginning of February, when Parliament will reassemble in due course. Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Forster, be it remembered, are bound by their pledges to Parliament not to put any new witness to the bar, not even the Habsburg Corpus Act, without first consulting the Legislature. Next in importance to the determination of the Government to put the law in force, the circumstance which has had the most salutary effect upon the Land League is the pastoral of Archbishop McCabe. As the Roman Catholic Metropolitan of Ireland Mr. McCabe has spoken in a very able and clear manner of the lawlessness and murder which have been committed. If, not encouraged, by the leaders of the League, he not only denounces those who have made "the land drink deeply of the blood of her children," but those also who fall in abhorrence of such deeds. At first the priests were inclined to side with the Land agitators, but now they are more and more committed. He has called the Church to her duty, and Archbishop McCabe's denunciation of bloodshed will set free the minds of thousands of people, and will be received gladly by the great body of the priesthood, who, whatever may have been their influence, always exerted it on behalf of law and order. Added to this the pastoral has received the open sanction of the Pope, and the fact which "seems to have become known to the public mind" is that the Roman Catholic hierarchy of the British Isles will be found entirely against the Land League. The Archbishop does not deny the necessity for an amelioration in the condition of the tenant, for he says there are thousands of families living in a condition that "would test the remedy of a slave-cost to Africa;" but he thinks the tempo should be left to Government, in which "seems to have become known to the public mind" is that the Roman Catholic hierarchy of the British Isles will be found entirely against the Land League. The Archbishop, however, goes further than this, and even suggests a plan of reform. He recommends fifty tenants, with the right of selling the holding, rents to be settled from time to time by a tribunal, and houses provided for the labourers. There are few statements who would not be disposed to consider this as a very good plan, and it is to be hoped that the tenants who would be glad of a substantial concession on the lines suggested by them. Probably the "priests' programme" will become the charter of the tenants; and, in any case, the extravagances of the Land Leaguers must lose in effect when confronted by the sensible proposals of the Roman Catholic clergy, who certainly cannot be accused of any sympathy with the "landless dweller" or the "landless farmer." This all the hampers the Land League. Hitherto the orators have made the tenants their theme of lamentation; but an incident in the south of Ireland shows that the labourers are by no means disposed to allow everything to go to the tenants. In fact, this wretched case has announced openly that they prefer to serve the landlords rather than the tenants. For the tenants have refused the "landless dweller" and the "landless farmer" in Ireland were landlords and tenant farmers, and no one said a word for the labourers. Now these last have spoken for themselves, and have made known that in any future land settlement they must be considered. Should they, in turn, be joined by the landless dwellers in the towns (as seems not improbable), the "landless dweller" and the "landless farmer" would be placed in the way of a realisation of the plans of the League. Were any further element of resistance needed to stem the revolutionary torrent, it would be found in the growing energy among the Orangemen in the North in setting on foot a counter-organisation to nullify the efforts of the League. The atrocities of the "Molly Maguires" and other county governments were not the only means of resistance to any sympathy with the League and its following; and the more responsible and respectable members of the Home Rule party, while expressing sympathy with the cause of land reform, hold studiously aloof from the Land League and its agitation. The terrorism in the west has lately taken a more ignoble form than the murder of Lord Mountmorres. The tenants of the County of Wick, Lord Mountmorres no living soul will work for her, either from superstition or the fear of their lives. She has had to have her wood cut for her by the police, threatening letters of the vilest possible description have been sent to her; and, indeed, so intolerable has her position become that she is about to leave the country, and will be, it is said, proceeding to the Continent. NEW CALEDONIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NOUMEA, Nov. 24.

Nothing new of importance since my last respecting the convict element. The measures of precaution taken by the authorities to prevent a renewal of riotous scenes at the embarkation of the various gangs of convict labourers each evening for Isle Nou have been productive of good results, inasmuch as no violent demonstrations now take place.

On Isle Nou, distant about half a mile from Noumea, is the great penitentiary establishment of New Caledonia. Several thousands of convicts are there imprisoned, condemned to hard labour. For the prosecution of certain Government works in Noumea, some hundreds of these men are brought over to work in two gangs daily, and are taken to the place of their daily labour, and are returned in the same manner at 5 p.m. It was at the return in the evening that the riotous scenes lately occurred necessitating the presence of the gendarmes, a brigadier of whom, with 16 of his men, were quite equal to the occasion. Calling upon his men to follow, he jumped into the midst of the four or five hundred criminals, and stayed there for nearly half an hour, until the violence of the convicts subsided, remaining quiet as sheep. Since then, a regular attendance of an armed force assists in the evening voyage.

Hearing much of this new move, one or two persons visits placed me in full possession of a knowledge of the interesting commerce. In former times—not many months past—this daily event took place with perfect quiet and regularity, under the sole supervision of the gendarmes, the guards of the company accompanying them in their daily rations. Now, how changed. Three mounted gendarmes, twenty soldiers and their lieutenant, eleven surveillants, and nine native police are employed to prevent any outbreak. But discipline among these men is a thing of the past. They talk and wrangle in loud tones, using such foul language that a French workman takes to the very ground, and the company of the talk of the talk of these word-crafters. I was somewhat edified to see the bearing of one gang of them as they passed the file of soldiers standing with fixed bayonets. Talking in the most jaunty style, half-defiant looks on their deplorable countenances, they walked by the soldiers, almost near enough to tread upon the heels of the talk of these word-crafters. I was somewhat edified to see the bearing of one gang of them as they passed the file of soldiers standing with fixed bayonets. Just before his men to make the next gang keep at a respectful distance, to leave them free to use their arms if necessary. The other day, when one of a gang, on shirking his work, was spoken to by the surveillant in charge, he replied, "Pay attention, surveillant, and do nothing to excite us; you must not excite us, you know." These few incidents show to what a pass things have come. The Government, though already tried and acquitted by the courts here, have now to bear the impenetration of the vile lot it is their duty to guard; to live with the consciousness that their lives hang by a mere thread; they are expected to perform their duty, and yet sure of condemnation in any case in which they may become involved with a convict. It is truly pitiable to see these poor fellows standing in the small charge of the Government, they leave in the punts, obliged to submit to the noisy defiance of the men, as evidenced in the unstrained employment of their filthy tongues. "Why do you not impose silence?" was exclaimed of them. "We dare not go against orders!" But cannot such a common-sense order be given?

No, it is not. It must come from above, and the Government, though already tried and acquitted by the courts here, have now to bear the impenetration of the vile lot it is their duty to guard; to live with the consciousness that their lives hang by a mere thread; they are expected to perform their duty, and yet sure of condemnation in any case in which they may become involved with a convict. It must come from above, and the Government, though already tried and acquitted by the courts here, have now to bear the impenetration of the vile lot it is their duty to guard; to live with the consciousness that their lives hang by a mere thread; they are expected to perform their duty, and yet sure of condemnation in any case in which they may become involved with a convict. It is truly pitiable to see these poor fellows standing in the small charge of the Government, they leave in the punts, obliged to submit to the noisy defiance of the men, as evidenced in the unstrained employment of their filthy tongues. "Why do you not impose silence?" was exclaimed of them. "We dare not go against orders!" But cannot such a common-sense order be given?

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Nothing new of importance since my last respecting the convict element. The measures of precaution taken by the authorities to prevent a renewal of riotous scenes at the embarkation of the various gangs of convict labourers each evening for Isle Nou have been productive of good results, inasmuch as no violent demonstrations now take place.

On Isle Nou, distant about half a mile from Noumea, is the great penitentiary establishment of New Caledonia. Several thousands of convicts are there imprisoned, condemned to hard labour. For the protection of certain Government works in Noumea, some hundreds of these men are brought over at 5 a.m. in two flat-bottomed square punts, towed by a steam launch, and are returned to the coast by the same means at 5 p.m. It was the custom in the evening that the riotous scenes lately occurred necessitating the presence of the gendarmes, a brigadier of whom, with 15 of his men, were quite equal to the occasion. Calling upon his men to follow, he jumped into the midst of the four or five hundred criminals, and stayed there until they were towed across the bay, all the convicts remaining on the shore. It was a regular and regular bandage of an armed force sent in the evening voyage.

Hearing much of this new move, one or two personal visits placed me in full possession of a knowledge of the interesting ceremony. In former times—not many months past—this daily event took place with perfect quiet and regularity, under the sole supervision of the gendarmes, and the convicts were employed in their daily tasks. Now, how changed. Three mounted gendarmes, twenty soldiers and their lieutenant, eleven surveillants, and nine native police are employed to prevent any outbreak. But discipline among these men is a thing of the past. They talk and wrangle in loud tones, using such foul language that a French workman near me at the time, in his confusion, thought it was the intention of the gendarmes to send him to the "boite" to see the bearing of one of them as they passed the file of soldiers standing with fixed bayonets. Talking in the most jaunty style, head tossed in the air, arms swinging, and with half-defiant looks on their deplorable countenances, they walked by the soldiers, almost near enough to touch them, and told him to make the next gang keep at a respectful distance, to leave them free to use their arms if necessary. The other day, when one of a gang, on shirking his work, was spoken to by the surveillant in charge, he replied, "Pay attention, surveillant, and do nothing to excite us; you must not excite us, you must not excite us." He then said, "I am not a convict, I am a free man, thanks to the 'imbecile,' as one here it turned on all sides, of those in France who make regulations for the conduct of prison discipline in New Caledonia; more properly should it be written, for the subversion of prison discipline; and perfectly have they succeeded. Several of the surveillants have informed me that they are perfect in their craft in trying to break the discipline of the convicts, but the men, but of the home Ministry, who will surely punish them in preference to the convicts. They hear of or see their comrades murdered under the most revolting circumstances. It has transpired that the head of the last murdered surveillant was not only carried on a stick through the township of Bourail upon the back of a convict, but that the man who carried him had been broken, upon the accusation of ex-Communists, though already tried and acquitted by the courts here. They daily have to hear the insolence of the vile lot it is their duty to guard; to live with the consciousness that their lives hang by a mere thread; they are expected to perform their duty, and yet share the same punishment as the convicts. It is truly pitiable to see these poor surveillants standing amidst the hundreds of convicts as they leave in the punts, obliged to submit to the noisy defiance of the men, as evidenced in the unrestrained employment of their filthy tongues.

"Why do you not impose silence?"

"No, sir, it must come from the Ministry themselves."

"No, sir, it must come from the Ministry themselves." Thus are the authorities here bound hand and foot, and a spirit of insubordination instilled into the convicts throughout the island. The next move will be the resignation of the surveillants, of which there have been several resignations, and the Ministry will call in the military to take the place of the surveillants. Time will, it is to be hoped, reveal the truth. The said "commisaires" avows that it would take at least six months to procure a complement of labourers for a small craft. who narrowly escaped being elected a member of Parliament for East Sydney, told the electors who prevailed upon his good nature so far as to get him "to run" for the West, that he had resolved on the morning following his defeat to pack up his portmanteau and to solace himself after his turmoil by meditations on the mountains. Now in my humble judgment that was the very best thing he could have done; not to slink away and sulk over the frustration of his patriotic ambition, but, having taking his licking kindly, to seek that repose which any candidate must need after a hard fought contest; and from these serene heights to contemplate the grand future which lies before this noble country. The speech to which I refer has come in very opportunely for me, because it has tersely and pointedly drawn attention to the higher uses of mountain-seeing, and has induced me to which I proposed to say something, but which I need not now discuss. I could, if it were necessary, cite medical opinion as to the value of the mountains as a means of ministering to the health of the body; and I am glad to be able to quote in support of my view, the opinion of Alderman Roberts, that they also supply the best physic for the mind.

"To him who in the love of nature holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language; for his gayner hours
She has a voice of gladness, and a smile
And softness towards him; and her darker moods
To him who walks with darker sympathy,
And healing sympathy, that steals away
Their sharpness are his awares."

Perhaps you think a man must be in a sorry fix up here who has nothing better to do than to read the reports of climate and speech made by our editors, and to feel thankful if you could have done with them for ever. Not so, however, ordinary mortals; and it is precisely one of the advantages of a sojourn on the mountains that the daily post brings the daily Press which places one en rapport with what is going on at the Thames or at the hustings in Sydney, as the case may be. I will confess that it is not good for every man; but I am sure that it is good for a large number. A resident will find plenty of occupation in planning and planting about his home; and, if he have still a fund of surplus energy, he can follow the example of the great British statesman who is credited with a fondness for laying the axe to the roots of the trees at Hawarden. Lincoln was a first-class rail splitter; (Gladstone is said to be good at it, too.) I may say that were there no other connection between chopping wood and statesmanship. I have not yet heard that Sir James Martin or Sir Henry Parkes carry their appreciation of country parents so far as to take a turn at felling, or cutting up firewood; although to be sure, the latter gentleman is given to delivering pretty homilies about the embellishment of the world by the axe and the saw, and has shown by his own example how much may be done to beautify and utilize what before he took it in hand would have been regarded as one of the waste places of the earth. A casual visitor, however, is debarr'd from this sort of recreation; and after he has seen that vast expanse of mountain tops which come into view as you strain your eyes to see the hills rising in the Falls, the Danby Glen, at Lawson's, the Falls at Wentworth, Katoomba, and Blackheath—the glorious views to be had from Mount Victoria—and the Lithgow Valley Zig-zag—he ought to have some definite use to which to put his further leisure. If I might prescribe, I would recommend the study of natural history as a means of giving interest to his walks, and of bringing him to a more correct synthesis. Not that I know much about the subject myself; but I am led to make the recommendation from a conversation with a friend whom I introduced into one of the magnificent gorges of the Grose, between Springwood and Faulconbridge. At the bottom of the valley there were pools of clear water, connected with each other by a series of rapids, and between them was a forest of gum trees sloping upwards to the height of perhaps a 1000 feet, until the trees on the summit of the ridge seemed to spread their boughs in the sky. In the winding course of the ridges which hedged in the valley there were many gutters of smooth boulders where the rain falling on the spur, having collected into running streams, had made a way. Between these foaming cataracts would be times of heavy rain these foaming cataracts would be worth a day's journey to see. Their existence must be shortlived, and it may be well that it is so, for it may be supposed that the constant scour of even small torrents over the soft sandstone would considerably hasten the inevitable reduction of the mountains—a consummation devoutly to be wished. I have seen the same thing in the valleys of the leveling tendencies of the age. There was a small silver current, which seemed to be perennial, whose beauty as it leaped over a rock into a deep pool, margined with pure white sand, thrilled one's heart with gladness. The sides of the miniature cave under the rock were hung with ferns of many gorgeous forms, and these were reflected, as in a mirror, in the pool. The water, as it fell, was falling clear, and which was almost hidden from view by the luxuriant vegetation around it. Following the running water, the boundaries of the valley receded until there sprang up in front between the two ranges an independent spur, and through the narrow gateways on each side of it one might look out upon the setting of the sun, and the stars, and the moon, and the stars seemed at this spot to be encircled by mountains, and in the little amphitheatre thus formed there had been a small forest of turpentine, every tree of which had attained grand dimensions. The timbers from these had been dragged up piecemeal to form "sleepers" for the railway track; and were it not for the great cost of haulage every tree would have been worth its weight in gold. Almost the only "big tree" in this miniature Yosemite like landscape was an old red gum about ten feet in diameter, whose vitals had been consumed by fire. Two or three men might find shelter within his charred trunk; but on one side the bark had escaped destruction, and although his heart's core had been eaten out by the, and the currents of his life had been nearly all dried up this grand old forester was resolutely set upon doing his duty to the end, for, in return for the sunshine which warmed his thin hide, he sent out a crescent of pink and green leaves as tender and fresh as any which clothed the striplings about him. The valley also was filled with waratahs, whose rich scarlet blossoms would have fed the eyes of the Israelites, and with a few ferns of the most luxuriant and in one part of it there was a dense thicket of mimosa in full flower—a cloth of gold formed of blossoms, so massive, pure, and fragrant as to almost make one envy the lot of those busy little foragers, the native bees, which were making hay, or rather honey, while the sun shone. I could have indulgently enjoyed the golden splendour of this forest of mimosa, had I not been so much interested by the fact, being of a more active temperament, was not to be dragged by fragrant odours or lured by the effulgent glories of golden flowers into a condition of listless reverie, and so his began to poke about to see what else he could find. He was not long before he discovered a nest of hairy scorpions at the foot of one of the rocks, and he was not long before he was by which they descended from the branches above, where they had held their nocturnal banquet. Sprung from eggs laid in in the bark of the tree, they no doubt consider they have a perfect right to feed on its foliage, and until such time as they are provided with wings will continue their voracious depredations, crawling, when necessary, from tree to tree, in a continuous line, and thus, by an unmitigated faith in their leaders, and in themselves. If the rope of scorpions were to be broken at any point, I do not pretend to say what the rear lot would do; but by sticking close they take precautions that there shall be no one lost in the bush—no need for the establishment of an office for missing friends.

When metamorphosed into myths, this commonwealth of greedy crawlers may become respectable; but one would think that nobody but a blackfellow would get up a bush of this kind of "gum." I confess that I was not at all in the mood
